

IN EVERYONE'S INTERESTS: WHAT IT MEANS TO INVEST IN THE HUMANITIES

Monday 27th January 2014
5:00 - 6:30 pm

Andrew Wiles Building, Mathematical Institute, Radcliffe
Observatory Quarter, Woodstock Road, Oxford

The launch of Humanities and the Public Good, a special series of events bringing together leading scholars in the humanities and sciences, and influential figures beyond academia, to consider the role of the humanities in addressing contemporary challenges.

Opening presentation by Earl Lewis, President of the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation.

Responses from:

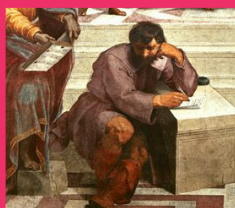

Charlotte Higgins, Chief Arts Writer, the Guardian

Dame Hermione Lee, President of Wolfson College and Biographer

Rt. Hon. David Willetts, M.P., Minister of State for Universities and Science

Marcus du Sautoy, Charles Simonyi Professor for the Public Understanding of Science and Professor of Mathematics, University of Oxford

Introduced by Andrew Hamilton, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Oxford, and chaired by Shearer West, Head of the Humanities Division. The panel responses will be followed by general discussion. This event is free and open to all. We recommend you register to guarantee a seat. Please visit the TORCH website for more information.

Hosted by

The Oxford Research Centre in the Humanities (TORCH)

www.torch.ox.ac.uk/publicgood

