

Don't Leave School Without It:

Millennial Innovators Speak For the Role of the Arts & Humanities in the Transformation of Society

Friday, April 22nd

2:30 - 6:00pm

Hobart and William Smith Colleges

Gearan Center for the Performing Arts

Free & Open to the Public. Appetizers & Drinks Provided

Please RSVP by April 16th to dontleaveschoolwithoutit@gmail.com

*Arts and Humanities:
Don't Leave School
Without Them.*

This is not the advice most-often heard among college students. We all know not to leave school without a plan, a skill-set, a career path, but without the Arts and Humanities? Why not? This half-day, interactive conference and workshop addresses this question and explores the hidden, essential value of the Arts and Humanities to our contemporary society.

For more information, go to:
www.ny6thinktank.org

Keynote Speakers & Workshop Leaders

Ryan Holladay

Media artist who creates site-specific sound installations, interactive concerts and GPS-based compositions for sites across the United States.

Ryan and his brother have composed pieces activated by the National Mall in Washington DC, Central Park in New York City and they're currently working on a piece inspired by Route One in California.

Jenny Gottstein

Director of Games at The Go Game, a business that designs and directs games that primarily focus on team building. People such as Jenny generate games like neighborhood puzzle missions, zombie-themed disaster preparedness games, and even charity-centered road trips.

Andrew Borden-Chisholm

Skidmore College alum, Owner and Executive Producer of SpinTheVerb Productions, started in 2008 to craft music and story-driven marketing as well as non-fiction shorts with an intimate style.

